SWANSEA (i.e. Sweyn's-ea), Glamorganshire, is a municipal and parliamentary borough, market town and seaport, on a beautiful bay of the Bristol Channel, and is served by the three leading Railways. By means of its harbour, and of the Tawe, it commands a ready outlet for the productions of the interior of Glamorganshire. It is much resorted to during the summer for sea-bathing; and possesses several commodious hotels. Of the public buildings, the chief are the parish church of St. Mary, a handsome modern edifice, with a large square tower at one end; the ruins of the castle, a handsome Roman Catholic chapel, the church of St. Matthew, and other district churches for all denominations, a town hall, union workhouse, sailors' home, infirmary, public hall, free library and reading rooms, custom house, mechanics' institute, technical college, Royal South Wales Institute, and two markets—one for general purposes, the other for fish, from which a huge trade is done with the Midlands and district, nearly 9,000 tons being imported monthly. It has a large shipping trade, is the centre of the copper trade, and has extensive steel, tin, iron, and other manufactures. Swansea possesses four excellent docks. The new King's Dock (capable of accommodating the largest ship afloat) was opened in October, 1909. It is the natural outlet of the anthracite coal industry. Swansea returns two members to Parliament. Market days, Wednesday and Saturday. Population, nearly 130,000.

The Docks consist of the King's Dock, Prince of Wales Dock, the North Dock, and the South Dock; each equipped with modern appliances for the rapid loading and unloading of vessels. The Entrance Channel to the Harbour is lighted by means of gas buoys. The New King's Dock, capable of accommodating the largest vessels afloat, was opened for traffic Nov. 23rd, 1909. The Quays are 32,000 feet in length. The Warehouses contain a floor area

429,507 square feet. The Railways of the Trust have direct connections with Great Western, London & North Western, Midland and Rhondda and Swansea Bay Railways. There are 27 Coal Tips and 104 Hydraulic, Electric, Steam and Hand Cranes. Swansea is the centre of the anthracite coal district. There are more Patent Fuel Works in Swansea than at any other port in the Kingdom; and the fuel is held in high repute in Continental and other markets. There is a large area of land available for fuel works, creosote works, saw mills and other commercial purposes. Lines of Steamers run between Swansea and the following ports, viz. :—New York, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Singapore, Hong Kong, Yokohama, Nagaski, Hiogo, Java ports, Rio de Janeiro, Santos, Rosario, Monte Video, Buenos Ayres, Ports in Chili and Peru, St. Petersburg, Hamburg, Amsterdam, Rotterdam, Antwerp, Treport, Rouen, Nantes, Bordeaux, Oporto, Lisbon, Setubal, Barcelona, Genoa, Leghorn, Venice, Trieste, Fiume, ports in Greece, Constantinople and other Turkish ports, Galatz, Ibrail, Odessa, Batoum, Alexandria, &c. Within the harbour are Eight Graving Docks. Extensive provision has been made for the Fish Trade in the South Dock. The Swansea Fleet now numbers about 30 Steam Trawlers in addition to liners and smacks. Pilotage—The Trustees are the pilotage authority. Pilotage is non-compulsory, both inwards and outwards. Rates and Charges are moderate. The Mumbles Lighthouse Signal Station is now worked by the Trustees. Vessels calling for orders can communicate with their owners without lowering a boat, good and sheltered free anchorage being found under the Mumbles Head at any state of the tide. The Trustees have erected on the Mumbles Head a Reed Fog Horn Signal, giving three blasts of about two seconds' duration in quick succession every two minutes. For information on any point connected with the port and harbour, apply to William Law, general manager. Registered address for telegrams, "Law, Swansea."

SWANSEA

Trades and Professional Section,

INCLUDING

Bishopston, Blackpill, Bonymaen, Brynhyfryd, Caswell, Clase, Clydach-on-Tawe, Cockett, Cwm, Cwmbwrla, Dunvant, Fforestfach, Gorseinon, Gower, Gowerton, Hafod, Ilston, Killay, Landore, Llansamlet, Loughor, Manselton, Melyncrythan, Morriston, Mumbles, Penclawdd, Pentrechwyth, Pentre Estyll, Plasmarl, Pontlliw, Port Tennant, St. Thomas, Sketty, Treboeth, Trehafod, Upper Loughor, Waunarlwydd, Ynisforgan, &c.

SWANSEA (i.e. Sweyn's-ea), Glamorganshire, is a municipal and parliamentary borough, market town and seaport, on a beautiful bay of the Bristol Channel, and is served by the three leading Railways. By means of its harbour, and of the Tawe, it commands a ready outlet for the productions of the interior of Glamorganshire. It is much resorted to during the summer for sea-bathing; and possesses several commodious hotels. Of the public buildings, the chief are the parish church of St. Mary, a handsome modern edifice, with a large square tower at one end; the ruins of the castle, a handsome Roman Catholic chapel, the church of St. Matthew, and other district churches for all denominations, a town hall, union workhouse, sailors' home, infirmary, public hall, free library and reading rooms, custom house, mechanics' institute, technical college, Royal South Wales Institute, and two markets—one for general purposes, the other for fish, from which a huge trade is done with the Midlands and district, nearly 9,000 tons being imported monthly. It has a large shipping trade, is the centre of the copper trade, and has extensive steel, tin, iron, and other manufactures. Swansea possesses four excellent docks. The new King's Dock (capable of accommodating the largest ship afloat) was opened in October, 1909. It is the natural outlet of the anthracite coal industry. Swansea returns two members to Parliament. Market days, Wednesday and Saturday. Population, nearly 130,000.

ABERDARE, MERTHYR TYDFIL

AND DISTRICT,

Including MOUNTAIN ASH, ABERAMAN, ABERNANT, CWMAMAN, DOWLAIS, HIRWAIN, TRECYNON, CWMDARE, PENYWAIN, LLWYNCOED, etc.

ABERDARE is an important mining district situated in the north-eastern part of Glamorganshire. The town stands in the centre of a pleasant valley traversed by the river Cynon, bounded on either side by lofty hills. From an insignificant hamlet, it has, within some fifty or sixty years, become a town of considerable importance. It is one of the most pleasantly laid-out towns in South Wales, and is exceptionally well governed in all local matters. The quality of the coal found in the district is unsurpassed. Railway accommodation in the valley is afforded by a branch of the Great Western Railway, which joins the main line at Neath and Pontypool Road, and the Taff Vale Railway.

The geographical extent of the parish is 16,307 acres. Its extreme length is 7½ miles, computing from the village of Hirwain to Mountain Ash. Its breadth again is about six miles, reckoning from the little Rhondda river, near what is known as Castell-y-nos, to Garn-tyle-hir, on the summit of the mountain between Aberdare and Merthyr. The principal rivers are the Dare and the Cynon.

The number of inhabitants in 1801 was 1,486. In 1811, the number was 2,782—that number including the workmen employed in constructing the canal. In 1825, the numbers had fallen to their normal state—2,063. The figures for the other years are as follows :—

YEARS.	POPULATION.	YEARS.	POPULATION.
1831	3,961	1871	37,704
1841	6,747	1881	35,513
1851	14,998	1891	40,906
1861	32,299	1901	43,357
